MAUDE ADAMS Tells the Story of One Thousand and One Nights of "The Little Minister."

New York, Feb. 25.-One thousand and one times of "The Little Minister" had fust gone into history.

It seems a tremendous amount of work to look back upon, but Miss Maude Adams, who was the Lady Babble in all those ten hundred and one performances, did not seem to consider the record she had made as anything very unusual.

As she sat in her dressing-room at the Empire Theater after the curtain had gone down on the last act of "The Little Ministo " Men Adems appeared to be snything but weary of the role of Lady Babble. In fact, she was as enthusiastic over it as though the performance she had just finished was the premiere, instead of the one thousand and first time. This was Wednerday night, and the popular actress was in the best of spirits. She fairly bubbled with vivaciousness as she explained what an altogether enjoyable and easy thing it is to play one part a thousand times, provided, of course, that one likes the part.

"Does it ever become monotonous?" she was asked. "Does not your interest in the part go down at all as the number of the performances go up?"

"I have never grown tired of Lady Eabble in 'The Little Minister.' " replied Miss before she ever appeared on the stage. This was due to the great delight I exorienced when Mr. Charles Frohman and Mr. Barrie selected me for the part, and I have never failed to feel that same defight in it ever since. I do not think I will ever tire of it." ALWAYS FEELS IT.

"Can you act the role as well on the thousandth time as on the first?" "Yes, I can feel and live Lady Babble equally well on the one thousandth performance as I did on the first performance, or, it might be better to say, as I felt her when I first rehearsed the part. me at once. In fact, the very first time I read the play I was absorbed by the role and began to live it in my mind."

"Then there is no particular time in your experience when a performance can be counted upon as being the best; not the first, when everything is strange, nor the tenth, when the play has got to running smoothly, nor the one hundredth, nor the one thousandth?" "Oh, no; there is no set time to arrive

"Not at all. I would feel strange and sad, indeed, if during my career I were compelled to give up Lady Bubble altogether. I have grown into it and love it so strongly that when I play another part I really feel as if it were Lady Bubble herself that were playing it."

"Do you ever change the conception of a part as the number of performances in-
